

Abstract

This bachelor thesis is focused on three late Baroque churches in the Děčín region from the heritage conservation point of view. Namely the church of St. Wenceslaus in Děčín Rozbělesy, the church of St. Francis Xavier in Děčín Bělá and the Church of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary in Arnoltice. All three buildings are connected with the name of the regional builder Jan Václav Kosch, whose life and work are briefly discussed in the first chapter. Following are the treatises on individual buildings. For each of them, its history and description are presented, and its current status and the possibilities for future modifications and repairs are evaluated. The aim of the thesis is to draw attention to the poor status of significant regional monuments and to outline possible steps for their renewal.
