

The aim of this thesis is to concentrate to inform the community with less known problems of nursing the patients with disorders of sexual identification - with transexuality.

The persons with this disorder have genetic and somatic equipment belong to one sex, however their sexual identification is orientated to contrary gender. Surgical conversion of sex of transexuals forms only one of the aspects by complex approach to this complicated disorder. The decision when the surgery is indicated is up to sexologist and authorized by the committee. The commission decision is based on detailed and prolonged psychological approach to everyone. The observation is pointed at adaptation for new social status after longtime hormonal treatment and follows after operation and official conversion of the gender as well.