

The theme of this bachelor theses are religious homophilic relationships on czech Twitter.

The theoretical part is focused on homophilic principle and its sociological areas into which is projected; such as race homophily, gender homophily, political homophily, religious homophily or homophily in romantic relationships. The theoretical part is also describing the problematic of social network services and its homophily.

The main part if the thesis is consists of research on Twitter. The research was conducted to find out how much is a religious content represented on Twitter and how much is its representation different from an atheistic representation.