

Summary

This thesis, entitled “Observance of the Lord’s Supper in Pentecostal Churches” attempts to introduce the observance of the Lord’s Supper in the Apostolic Church, including its pastoral aspects. Included in this is an outlined discussion on the same theme. The first part of the work introduces characteristics of the Pentecostal Movement in general, and then its representative in the Czech Republic, the Apostolic Church, in the context of its historical-theological development. The second part adds some historical moments of the remembrance of the Lord’s Supper in this context. The subsequent discussion then more closely examines the understanding of the ceremony of the Lord’s Supper in the Pentecostal environment, especially within the Apostolic Church. The third part discloses the specific practice of the Lord’s Supper in the churches of the Apostolic Church. This comes from foundational documents of the Church and survey-based research. The final part discusses the pastoral aspects of the Lord’s Supper, working from information attained from the surveys, life experiences and finally from selected sermons related to the remembrance of the Lord’s Supper.
