

Abstract

The thesis deals with the issue of Korean minorities living in Japan. It is divided according to time periods into the pre-war 1930's, when nationalism was rising in Japan, into the post-war years, which represented many changes in the perception of foreign minorities, the 70's-80's, when internationally recognized human rights treaties gradually came into force, and finally it focuses on current events in Japan, taking into account Japanese-Korean relations.

Keywords

Japan, Korea, minorities, discrimination, Mindan, Soren