

The bachelor thesis deals with Fair Trade from human rights and ethics point of view. The first part introduces Fair Trade with focus on its principles and aims, further on it introduces the problematics and the circumstances of trade in developing countries with focus on working conditions. The second part of this thesis is devoted to human rights. It includes documents or their selected parts dealing with working conditions; they are contextualized with Fair Trades principles. The child labour is also referred here. The third part focuses on Fair Trade and its principles from ethics point of view. It introduces the idea of rightness, conscience and responsibility in global measures and from individual point of view as well. In the last part the author describes her own research dealing with students' attitudes towards Fair Trade.
