

This bachelor thesis theme is “The Life at a Current Small Class School” performed at Teplysovice Primary School is an attempt to analyze three subject matters, related to the life of the school. The first monitored item is a pedagogical activity at the school, focused mainly on a creation of a school educational programme. The programme should start 1 September 2007. The next topic deals with the integration of pupils with learning disabilities and special learning needs and a creation of individual educational plans for these pupils. There is also an inspection of lessons given as an additional look at the matter. The second part of the thesis is devoted to questionnaire research among the parents of the pupils. The research is divided into three items. The first one recognizes the content of the parents with the school, the second one the awareness of the parents in the area of teaching methods, and the third one the willingness of the parents to take part at a common run of the school. The third part of the thesis deals with the attitude of the school to a general public, namely to the founder of the school - Teplysovice village. The attitude is inspected mainly from the legislation point of view. There is also described the relationship with some other institutions, state administration authorities, and a general public. The conclusion is devoted to the analysis of all main themes, their discussion, suggestions, and recommendations.
