The goal of this study is exact description of distributed hash table (DHT) that is implemented in BitTorrent client Azureus, its usage as a distributed tracker and comparison with another DHT that is used for the same purpose. This study also includes implementation of interface based on a TCP server that provides easy access to the DHT without need to reimplement it. Specification of communication protocol is included as well.