

Abstract

Man and liturgy. Mass and psychology of today's man.

This theses deals with the celebration of the Holy Mass with an emphasis on the needs of today's man in terms of modern psychology. In the first part the work will deal with contemporary man, his values and spirituality. In the next part it will try to approach the celebration of the Holy Mass in connection with the values and needs of contemporary man from the psychological point of view.

He asks whether the celebration of the Holy Mass, as we know it today, corresponds to the current needs or values of today's man. It considers possible forms of celebration of worship that would best meet the aforementioned human needs.