Title: The Theological Nature of Evangelism and its Meaning for the Spiritual Life of the Evangelist

The principal aim is to research the theme of Evangelism from point of view of its theological nature and spiritual significance for the life of the Evangelist.

The first part is an enquiry of the theological nature of Evangelism in the light of Holy Writ and to present records of the sacrament and the theological reflection thereon. The basic premise is the secret of the Holy Trinity: the Father's plan of redemption and the mission of the Son and the Holy Spirit.

The second part endeavours to apply the results of research of the theological nature of Evangelism to the spiritual life of the Evangelist, considering how the Evangelist should live his life and how his spiritualism might appear. The basic premise is again the secret of the Holy Trinity and consideration of the role played by the evangelist in this secret.

Key words: Evangelism, spiritualism of the Evangelist, the Holy Trinity, redemption, mission.
