

Abstract

Author deals with possibility of making communal family policy in Prague. Author shows the drafts, how such kind of policy can be developed. The first part of this study offers analysis of contemporary stage in the several levels - stakeholders analysis, where the key stakeholders, their attitudes, reciprocal relations and ways of communication are marked out. Another part of analysis is the comparison analysis - the specific characteristics of the city districts are analysed, as well as the characteristics of the regions and the Capital of the Slovak Republic, Bratislava. The secondary data are used as well as the primary data derived from the author's research. The second part of the study deals with the designs of the communal family policy in Prague and the description of the policy tools, according to the findings another methods are used - e.g. construction of the problems and goals trees and the future scenarios. There are many supplements in the study, mainly the tabs, schemes and other materials in the appendix.