

Abstract:

This paper examines the specifics of the functioning of part of the educational space of the Russian diaspora of the first wave of emigration. An analysis of the essays published in the journal «Russian School Abroad» gives a general idea of Russian schools abroad during the first wave of emigration, their organization and teaching features, as well as options for solving various problems that arise in the course of educational institutions. About 40 essays on schools in Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Germany, Poland, France, Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia, Turkey, Bessarabia, Finland, Tunisia and even the USA and Manchuria were published in 34 issues of the magazine. Articles by such emigrant teachers as D.M.Sokoltsov, A.I. Tyminsky, A.T. Pavlov, and others made it possible to create a more holistic view of education abroad, to identify common problems of teaching and upbringing of students.
