Tereza Kiszová: Music in Anthony Burgess' Fiction

Abstract (EN):

Music has been considered an ideal model for literature since Romanticism, instead of: Literature has been considered an ideal model for literature.

p. 9:

Burgess's first published fiction, a triptych of novels known as ~~The Malayan Trilogy~~ represents a comic strand of his writing. The three novels portray the years right before Malayan independence from the perspective of colonial officer Victor Crabbe. The postcolonial themes occur also in ~~The Right to an Answer (1960)~~, another of Burgess's comical novels, instead of: ~~Burgess's first published fiction, a triptych of novels known as The Malayan Trilogy—Time for a Tiger (1956), The Enemy in the Blanket (1958) and Beds in the East (1959)~~ represents a comic strand of his writing. The three novels portray the years right before Malayan independence from the perspective of colonial officer Victor Crabbe. (the double nature of the name being one of many illustrations of Burgess's partiality to word puns in his texts).
