

The thesis is concerned with several areas of industrial design in the 1930s, with the main attention paid to technical qualities, functionality, and modernity. I try to portray their reception of the contemporaries, based on the preserved Czechoslovak texts. I depicted only several fields that represent two areas: design products for the exteriors and interiors. Territorial extent is given according to the products' link to Czechoslovakia and its citizens.