

Diploma thesis „Primary prevention of social unwanted phenomena“ handles the current situation in the Czech Republic of an issue called primary prevention. It is here described a lot of social unwanted phenomena, which jeopardises the most the education and evolution of the young generation.

A significant part describes the concretely two years long primary prevention program from the Christian pedagogical psychology clinic, which was realised at a secondary school in Prague. I was part of this program personally as lecturer. Next I am describing my own experience from the primary prevention project „Enforcing positive values of life and attitude“. Part of this work is a research, which has been accomplished among children in school after I completed the program. The purpose of my thesis is an evaluation of the quality of the primary prevention program.
