

Abstract

Staněk, J. HIV/AIDS infection and some ethics aspects connecting with this disease.
Prague 2010. Dissertation.

Bachelor's study. Charles University, Prague. Catholic Theological Faculty. Department of Theological Ethics and Spiritualist Theology.

Head of study: PhDr. Libor Ovečka, Th.D.

Keywords: HIV/AIDS, infection disease, prevention, therapy, moral theology, Christian Values

The goal of the dissertation is to give some informations on ethics problems connecting with HIV/AIDS infection. Partly informing about these problems, partly solving these problems.

The first chapter describes illness, its origin and history, statistic dates in the world and in our country, the way of the transmission, diagnostic and therapy of this disease and prevention.

In the following part the problem of serological examination is analysed and also some problems around information about of this disease, about nursing problems and ethics aspect of HIV therapy.

The right of the positive persons to get married and to give birth to a child is discussed.

Finally, problematics of disease's acquirement, the process of dying and death is also discussed. It is all reflected through the catholic moral theology.