Dissertation “Biblical foundations of ecological spirituality” is an attempt to answer the need for exploration of the signs of our times – devastation of our existing environment caused by an estrangement of humanity from nature, resulting from alienation from God and human beings.

Similarly, it is a reaction to the criticism of the Christianity incited by ecologists and naturalists.

Dissertation’s positum consists of exegesis of the fundamental biblical texts referring to creation of the world and humanity, their following reinterpretation emerging from the stimuli of naturalists and ecologists.

Application of the specific solution can be inspired by some of the patterns of ecologically lived spirituality from the Christian history, resulting in the concept of particular theological models. These models represent the synthesis of ethics, ecology and theology. Realisation of the ecological spirituality is outlined in some of the theological aspects of faith of the practising Christian. Harmony of practice of the Christian spirituality and the eco-awareness facilitates the journey towards the renewal of the fundamental relationship God – humanity and nature and at the same time solves the ecological crisis of the secular society.
