The Conception of The Parish After The Second Vatican Council

Tomas van Zavrel

This thesis deals with the conception of the parish after the second Vatican council. Its aim is to describe what kind of parish concept emanates from the documents of the last council and how this conception was developed in various church documents thereafter. It puts this conception into a historical context with emphasis on the period after the 19th century. Three views on the parish are presented: pastoral sociological, pastoral dogmatic and pastoral legal. The basic functions of the parish are unfolded from today's perspective and finally several models of parish concepts are presented.
