

The topic of this graduation thesis is the Communication of information in the information design. Information design is a multidisciplinary field that applies knowledge from many areas in order to transfer information efficiently. The work defines methods, means and tools of information design and assesses their practical impact. The practical part describes the use of information design on the example of communication of traffic information by The Prague Public Transport Company, Inc.