

Abstract

The work „Community and religion“ is the phenomenological reflexion introducing into the problems of the relation between the politics and the religion. We come out of two different positions. The first is represented by St. Augustin. He understands the religion as constitutional element of the political community. The second position is defended by Hannah Arendt. She says that between the politics and the religion is no intersection. In our work we try to define the visual field of both of two authors and to find a solution to understanding for the politics as relation between the person and the community.
