Author: Jiří Suchomel

Annotation:

This work deals with the models of church unity, as they were defined and developed during modern ecumenical movement throughout the 20th century. It describes three basic models -the cooperative-federal model, the organic union, and the model of mutual recognition - and centers around the last one. Some known realizations of the mutual recognition model are presented and discussed (Leuenberg Agreement, Porvoo Common Statement, Meissen Common Statement), together with the ecumenical position of the Roman Catholic Church.
