

ANOTACE

This study in details reflects upon moral aspects of piety towards dead bodies. It discusses reasons, why should man keep etical discipline in relation to dead bodies. In the form of overview are listed possible sources and preconditions for piety towards the life, from the biology, philosophy and religion point of view. The most attention is given to religious view and its biblical, eschatological and antropological aspects. Also questions of funerals and dissections are addressed in the light of challanges in the modern history. On the contrary are given practical examples of disrespect towards dead bodies (corpse, corpse leftovers and organs robbery, necrophilia, disputable human behavior in the hospitals and in undertaking services). Finally, teological aspects of the human body, having piety source in the God and in His creation, incarnation and in the Jesus Crist redemption are discussed.
