

Abstract

Bachelorthesis "Jesus in the reception of the contemporary Judaic exegetes David Flusser, Geza Vermes and Pinchas Lapidé" looks Jewish exegesis in the gospels, describes the conformity and differences in interpretation and seeks to find its relevance to Christian exegesis. View of Jewish exegetes introduces us deeper into contemporary issues, events are rendered in the context of time and continuity of Jewish tradition. Since Christianity built on Jewish foundations, there is between the two religions exegetes good agreement as to the historical danností. Differences are mainly seen in the interpretation of particular events. Jewish exegete trying to stick resolutely historical interpretation, Christian exegete give greater weight to theological interpretation.