

The aim of this bachelor thesis is to introduce a social service Home with special arrangements for children and adults with autism with challenging behaviour in Libčice nad Vltavou and the work and professional leading a team of personal assistants in direct care with this target group. With the use of professional publications, the outputs of the research and my own experience, I provide the reader an overview of autism spectrum disorders and the specifics of working with people with these disorders associated with problem behaviour. I am talking also about a possible professional leading a team of staff in direct care with people with autism. There is the research as a part of this bachelor thesis, during which I would like to acknowledge the importance of teamwork, supervision and continuing education. To name the potential strengths or weaknesses in leadership, to encourage the existing method or potential changes in it. This research may also help during formation of a new team, in case of creating a new home with special arrangements for this target group.
