

Abstract:

There have been a few papers about the German language and the acceptance, which deal with the reception of Germanism by the younger generation. Czech language is, as other Europe's languages, enriched by Anglicisms, but Germanism can be still found by the Czech informal and technical language. However their frequency comes down. This bachelor thesis will deal with the thesis (Trost, Povejšil) which says, that there is dispraise of understanding and active knowing of Germanism. For this purpose was made a research in the area of technical language in the building industry, and its terminology. The result of this research showed, that the Germanism are in the recession by the younger Czech generation and by which means, that the thesis of Trost und Povejšil was confirmed.