This thesis views pre-Islamic Arabic poetry as a creation of oral mind, portraits it within the frame of oral-formulaic theory, which it attemps to apply on pre-Islamic texts. Among the aspects which were subjected to examination the greatest attention was paid to the formulaicity of pre-Islamic ode and the very moment of it's composition.