

Prenatal diagnosis mainly focuses on revealing aneuploidies – the most frequent cause of mental and physical retardation in the childhood and perinatal death. Nowadays, fetal cells are obtained by invasive methods of prenatal diagnosis with some risk of spontaneous miscarriage. To eliminate those perils only pregnancies detected by screening as presenting high risk of aneuploidies are subjected to the cytogenetic and molecular-genetic methods.