

Abstract

The aim of this thesis is to present a commented translation of two chapters from the book Les médecines différentes. The thesis has two main parts: the translation itself and the commentary which further consists of an analysis of the source text and a discussion of translation problems, supported with examples from the target text. It also provides explanations about the methods used during the translation process.