

This work deals with the restorative treatment of caries in deciduous teeth. The aims of this study were to explore which factors contribute to treatment failure, to compare results of preparation methods most often used in deciduous teeth treatment and to focus on the direct restorative materials.