

Abstract The aim of this bachelor thesis is to present and evaluate positive and negative aspects of common living of major Czech population together with minor Vietnamese population in the Czech Republic. The Vietnamese population is one of the biggest minorities in the country, however at the same time is very different from the majority and its cultural habits. The thesis shows reasons why Vietnamese come and their way of living in the country. Coexistence is generally at very good quality and is known as very positive and non-threat for natives. During common living with Czechs sometimes brings problems, however the society generally tries to solve them for positive results at both sides. General attitude of young people to Vietnamese community is investigated through survey.