

Summary

This thesis „The development of right-wing extremists in the Czech Republic“ consists only a theoretical part. It is focused on the creation, expression and linking right-wing extremist movements and political parties in the Czech Republic from 1989 to the present appearance National Democracy. The thesis deals with concepts such as neo-Nazism, extremism, racism and the right-wings.

Thesis contains political parties such as National Democracy, DSSS, SPR-RSČ, Islám v ČR nechceme...

The thesis is generally concerned with how the Velvet Revolution was seeping through the political and social sphere of ultra-right movement, and what was their manifestation.

Finally, this bachelor thesis deals with the threats of right-wing extremism in the current political and social situation.

Key words

Extremism, right-wing extremism, neo-Nazism, SPR-RSČ, National Democracy, migration, Nazism, racism, nationalism, xenophobia, European Union, Adam B. Bartoš, radicalism