

Abstract:

Bachelor thesis focuses on social services for children with ASD and their families. First theoretical chapter is about history of autism spectrum disorder. The next chapter is about the possibilities of support for families with children with ASD. The last chapter includes a detailed description of social services which families and their children can use with specific services in the capital city of Prague. In the practical part of my thesis I introduce qualitative research via personal interviews. These interviews are focused on local and financial availability of services and on general knowledge.
